WFP is providing food assistance to quarantined areas and hot spots in Liberia. These include the West Point slum in Monrovia where it is providing food assistance to around 50,000 people, Dolo's Town (Margibi) where food is being provided to around 17,000 people and rural communities in the north towards the epicenter of the Ebola epidemic.

WFP is also providing food supplies for the health authorities for holding centres where there are people who are suspected of having been in contact with the virus.

People in Dolo's town are receiving rations for a month – based on a family of five they receive 50kg rice, 9 kg split peas, and 4 litres of cooking oil. People are unable to move beyond the controlled areas and no traders or food are allowed in. Apart from what people may have in their cupboards or gardens, they depend on the food provided by WFP.

The Liberian Red Cross is WFP's partner in the distribution.

As the number of confirmed cases continues to grow, WFP is currently scaling up its response to the Ebola virus to provide assistance to more than one million people affected by the outbreak in Guinea, Liberia and Sierra Leone.

WFP provides food and logistical assistance to people alongside national government, the World Health Organisation (WHO) and others partners to support the treatment of Ebola patients and mitigate the risk of the virus moving into new areas.

So far, more than 140,000 people have received food assistance in the three countries. Common challenges in all three Ebola affected countries include transport and logistics; identifying the communities in need, reaching communities distant from the capital and main port, during the rainy season, with poor roads. WFP is having to adapt the way it works; because large gatherings are discouraged as the authorities work to contain the spread of the virus, WFP is distributing to smaller groups at a time.

How WFP is responding varies slightly from country to country:

Guinea: Providing food assistance through partners and health authorities to families of people infected, ill and recovered Ebola victims, and families and communities in food insecure “hot zones” within the affected prefectures including Gueckoudou, Macenta, Youmou, N’zerekoré, Kissidougou and Conakry.

Sierra Leone: Providing food to Ebola treatment centres in Kenema, Daru, Kailahun, and Koindu; isolated communities in border areas and other “hot zones” within the affected districts of Kenema, Kailahun, Bombali, PortLoko, Moyamba, Kambia, Tonkolil, Pujehun, Bo, Bonthe, Koinadgu and Western area; and Liberia: Providing food to holding centres for people suspected of having the disease, through government for other related medical structures and to isolated communities in border areas, and to quarantined areas and other “hot zones” within the counties Montserrado, Lofa, Bong, Bomi, Grand Cape Mount, Margibi, Nimba, Grand Bassa, and Rivercess.

WFP is also concerned about the knock-on effect of the restrictions on movement on trade, farming, harvesting of crops and the transfer of food from farms to markets. Recent assessments indicate staple food prices are on the rise.

WFP urgently needs US$70 million to continue its response to the Ebola emergency.
