“Following this cut, however, there was a fair amount of response from the donor community and the international community in general, and we have received indications that we will be getting an increase in the cash contributions.

However to put that into context we would not be able to translate that into food in hand for another 4 months.”

“We would like to reiterate that this is a country-wide issue. It’s not only Darfur. Darfur has been getting a lot of the publicity recently because of the Abuja peace agreement, the recent visit by Jan Egeland and a number of other issues that have been occurring out there, primarily security related issues.”
